NORTHERN VIRGINIA, the Washington District of Columbia, Maryland and Pennsylvania, are generally considered to be the most highly civilized and most advanced section of the United States. The region is rich in natural resources, including coal, iron, and oil. It is also the center of the nation's political and financial life. The region's population is over 10 million, and it is the most densely populated area in the United States.

The region's history is closely tied to the nation's. It was the site of the first American Revolution, the War of 1812, and the Civil War. The region's economy is based on a mix of industry, agriculture, and services. The region's culture is a blend of the North and South, and it is known for its high level of education and innovation. The region's climate is temperate, with hot summers and cold winters. The region's landscape is a mix of urban, suburban, and rural areas. The region's population is diverse, with a mix of ethnicities and religions. The region's government is a mix of federal, state, and local levels. The fertile soil, rainfall, and equable temperature assure large yields to the farmer and orchardist. The country has all the natural conditions needed for successful live stock breeding, while its nearness to the great cities of the East and the excellent facilities of the Southern Railway Company for quick transportation, give a great advantage to this section for the favorable marketing of its products.

It is a striking fact that, of the first five Presidents of the American Union, four established stately mansions and splendid estates in Northern Virginia—Washington at Mount Vernon, on the Potomac River, fifteen miles below Washington; Jefferson at Monticello in Albemarle County, near Charlottesville; Madison at Montpelier, in Orange County, near Orange Court House, and Monroe at Oak Hill, in Loudoun County, ten miles from Leesburg. Each of these historic places has been preserved practically as left by its illustrious founder.

desired to purchase a site for the construction of a home, or a home itself, opportunities abound throughout this section, which is now more attractive than ever before.

Nature has especially favored Northern Virginia in her gifts of climate and healthfulness. Protracted extremes of temperature are unknown, making this a delightful all-the-year-round climate, with an early spring and a glorious autumn which keeps pastures green until mid-winter.

The mountains that divide the Piedmont section from the valley run into ridges which break the country into rolling hills of sufficient elevation to give a perfect natural drainage, making it one of the healthiest countries in the world.

Life in Northern Virginia is not all work. Its people still cultivate the invigorating pleasures which the nature of the country and the abundance of fine horse flesh offer them. Fox hunting is the king of sports.

The people of Southern Virginia are proud of their land and its position in their history. They are proud of the great mountains of the region. The land is covered with forests and mountains, and the people of Northern Virginia are proud of their land and its position in their history. The people of the Valley are proud of their land and its position in their history. The people of the Valley are proud of their land and its position in their history.

In the middle of the valley, on a hill, is a small town. It is a small town, but it is a town of great beauty. It is a town of great beauty, and it is a town of great beauty. The number of commercial apple orchards is increasing at a very rapid rate but there are still opportunities in this industry in Northern Virginia. There are great areas of suitable land which have not yet been set to trees.

The Southern Railway Company, realizing the great advantages of Northern Virginia as a place for homes and for agriculture has undertaken to present, in a conservative way, the attractions of this favored region.

The main line of the Southern Railway traverses the heart of this region made famous by the homes of the early Presidents from Washington, D. C. to Charlottesville, Va., through the counties of Alexandria, Fairfax, Prince William, Fauquier, Culpeper, Orange, and Albemarle. A branch leaving the main line at Manassas, in Prince William County, traverses Fauquier, Warren, Shenandoah, and Rockingham Counties to Harrisonburg, and another branch, leaving the main line at Calverton, in Fauquier County, extends to Warrenton, in the same county. In addition to the towns already mentioned, there are located in this region, Alexandria, Culpeper, Orange, Fairfax, Remington, Front Royal, Riverton, Woodstock, Strasburg, Newmarket, Mount Jackson, Broadway, Leesburg, Haymarket, The Plains, Middleburg, Marshall, Markham, Upper-ville, and other progressive towns.

To those who dwell in the most densely populated region in the United States, extending along the Atlantic Seaboard from the Potomac River to the northern boundary of Massachusetts, the Southern Railway affords convenient passenger and freight service to and from this attractive region, where there is still room to stretch oneself. Passenger schedules are arranged with special reference to travel to and from the Eastern cities, adding to the attractiveness of this region as a place for country homes for residents of those cities.

For full information, address Passenger Traffic Manager, Southern Railway Company, Washington, D. C., or Land and Industrial Agent, Southern Railway Company, Washington, D. C.
